West Knitting Mill

West Knitting had a long, impressive service in Anson County beginning in 1927 - then came the Depression and World War II. Sometime about 1946, several local people joined in to revitalize West - Fulton A. Huntley, Charles and Hal Little, Fred Tillman, Pat Taylor, Harry Hodges - were just some of the group. The plant grew, employing hundreds of people, then in 1977 Reeves entered the picture, later J. E. Morgan Company.

The sign above is one that I did in July 1992. Holding up one end is Victoria Turner who was hired by West to do promotion, trade shows and the like. This particular one was a show for Roses - featuring "Homegrown" southern sweats (sweat suits). I did several trade show banners for Gitano, Pringles, J. E. Morgan Company, K-Mart, etc. for markets even in California and Scotland (Dawson). By this time so many that we had known at the mill through the years had retired, leaving just a few of the younger ones - but then came Dawson and other problems at West. Still, so many people were affected by the plant closing.

As for Victoria, she is married, has a daughter, Erika, lives in Martinsville, Virginia - with most of their summers in Hawaii.
