social distancing.

Pat was born in Cheraw, SC on November 24, 1944, to the late Chuck Williams and Lula Butler Williams.

She leaves to cherish her memories, her husband of over 53 years, Charles Allen of the home; her daughters Paige Allen Dyson (Michael) of Polkton and Ashlie Allen Jones (Chip) of Keystone Heights, FL. She was most proud of her grandchildren Gavin Jones and Kennedy Jones along with her only great-grandchild, Levi Jones. She is also survived by her sister and brother-in-law Jeanette and Curtis Howell, along with several nieces, nephews and their families.

Pat was predeceased by her brother and sister-in-law, Richard and Magdaline Williams.

She was Pat, Patsy, Patricia, Flossie, Mama or Mawmaw to those that knew and loved her. She graduated from Wadesboro High School in 1962 and worked for several years in local hosiery mills before she and Charles married. After they married and started a family she stayed home raising her girls for years before heading back into the workforce as a teller with Security Bank. Later she began working for the NC Department of Corrections at Anson Correctional and eventually retired in 2001

Pat spent many hours leading the church youth group, 4-H, and Girl Scout activities while her girls were young. She was a member of Polkton United Methodist Church and the Polkton Womens Service Club. She also made sure her kids grew up surrounded by furry and feathered friends as she loved all animals. She lost her last dog in December.

Because of Pat's love of animals, the family requests in lieu of flowers, tax-deductible donations be made to the Friends of Anson County Animal Shelter, PO Box 828, Wadesboro, NC 28170.

The family would like to extend their sincere appreciation to the staff of Anson Health and Rehab for the care provided to Pat during the last two months.

The arrangements are in care of Leavitt Funeral Home and online condolences may be made at www.leavittfh.com.

THE EXPRESS • January 12, 2022 • Page 2021: A Record-Breaking Year for New Jobs and Investment in North Carolina

24,224 new jobs announced with companies set to invest $10.1 billion in the state

Governor Roy Cooper announced 24,224 new jobs in North Carolina last year, representing 185 business recruitment, expansion or rural development projects that engaged with the North Carolina Department of Commerce or its team at the Economic Development Partnership of N.C. in 2021. These projects will bring $10.1 billion of capital investment into the state, marking new all-time highs for economic development performance.

"With our talented workforce, great quality of life and welcoming communities, employers know North Carolina is a place their businesses can grow and thrive," said Governor Roy Cooper. "We're building a stronger economy that works for everyone and we're going to continue to bring jobs to every corner of our state.' Top projects for 2021, as ranked by job creation totals, include:

Apple's selection of Wake County and the Research Triangle for a major research and development campus that will create 3,000 jobs;

Toyota's decision to build its first North American plant to produce batteries for electric vehicles at the Greensboro-Randolph Megasite, creating 1,750 jobs;

 FUJIFILM Diosynth's choice of Holly Springs for the largest end-to-end biopharmaceutical manufacturing facility in North America, creating 725 jobs in Wake County.

'North Carolina's record-setting performance comes in no small part from the hard work of many local and regional community leaders, along with the economic developers across the state that support the site selection process," said Commerce Secretary Machelle Baker Sanders. "Chris Chung and the team at the Economic Development Partnership of North Carolina also fast track positive outcomes for us. Companies often mention our state's collaborative approach, which gives us an edge as we compete for projects on the world stage.'

A majority of the year's economic development projects located or expanded in the state's more rural or economically distressed areas, with 71 percent of projects choosing either a Tier 1 or Tier 2 county, as delineated by North Carolina's economic development tier system. 53 percent of the projects involved companies that chose to expand an existing operation in the state.

In addition to Toyota's project in Randolph County, other significant projects in the state's Tier 1 or Tier 2 counties include:

 White Water Marine Group's acquisition of Hatteras Yachts and selection of Craven County for its first coastal manufacturing site. The company is part of Bass Pro Shops and will support 500 jobs in New Bern;

 MasterBrand Cabinets' expansion of its manufacturing facilities in Lenoir County, creating at least 464 new jobs in Kinston;

 Abzena Holdings' choice of Lee County for a significant biopharmaceutical manufacturing plant, creating 325 jobs in Sanford;

 Polywood's decision to expand its outdoor furniture manufacturing facility in Person County, creating 300 jobs in Roxboro;

Thermo Fisher Scientific's decision to expand current operations in Pitt County, creating 290 jobs in Greenville;

Champion Home Builders' selection of Robeson County for a production site, creating at least 225 jobs in Pembroke;

Glen Raven's decision to expand operations in Warren County, creating 205 jobs in Norlina.

Additional jobs were created in conjunction with rural development grants managed by Commerce's Rural Economic Development Division. A total of 3,235 new jobs were supported by $28.4 million in rural grant monies awarded by the state's Rural Infrastructure Authority during its meetings in February, April, June, August, October, and December. These public grants in turn attracted $1.22 billion in private-sector investment capital in support of job creation and improved infrastructure capacity for rural North Carolina.

The North Carolina Department of Commerce serves as the state's lead agency for community, workforce, and economic development. A searchable directory of all of the programs and services offered by the department is available at nccommerce.com/directory.

Protect Your Pets from Winter Woes

In many areas, winter is a season of bitter cold and numbing wetness. Help your pets remain happy and healthy during the colder months by following these simple guidelines.

 Don't leave dogs and cats outdoors when the temperature drops. Most dogs, and all cats, are safer indoors, except when taken out for exercise. Regardless of the season, shorthaired, very young, or old dogs and all cats should never be left outside without supervision. Short-coated dogs may feel more comfortable wearing a sweater during walks.

 No matter what the temperature, windchill threaten a pet's life. A dog or cat is happiest and healthiest when kept indoors. If your dog is an outdoor dog, however, he/she must be protected by a dry, draft-free doghouse that is large enough to allow the dog to sit and lie down comfortably, but small enough to hold in his/her body heat. The floor should be raised a few inches off the ground and covered with cedar shavings or straw. The house should be turned to face away from the wind, and the doorway should be covered with waterproof burlap or heavy plastic.

 Pets who spend a lot of time outdoors need more food in the winter because keeping warm depletes energy. Routinely check your pet's water dish to make certain the water is fresh and unfrozen. Use plastic food and water bowls rather than metal; when the temperature is low, your pet's tongue can stick and freeze to metal.

 Warm engines in parked cars attract cats and small wildlife, who may crawl up under the hood. To avoid injuring any hidden animals, bang on your car's hood to scare them away before starting your engine.

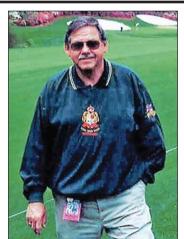

• The salt and other chemicals used to melt snow and ice can irritate the pads of your pet's feet. Wipe the feet with a damp towel before your pet licks them and irritates his/her mouth.

• Antifreeze is a deadly poison, but it has a sweet taste that may attract animals and children. Wipe up spills and store antifreeze (and all household chemicals) out of reach. Better yet, use antifreeze-coolant made with propylene glycol; if swallowed in small amounts, it will not hurt pets, wildlife, or your family.

• Probably the best prescription for winter's woes is to keep your dog or cat inside with you and your family. The happiest dogs are those who are taken out frequently for walks and exercise but kept inside the rest of the time. Dogs and cats are social animals who crave human companionship. Your animal companions deserve to live indoors with you and your tamily
