Edward Pattillo Tells the Story of Southern Pioneers and Planters

NewSouth Books announces the publication of Edward Pattillo's Carolina Planters on the Alabama Frontier: The Spencer-Robeson-McKenzie Family Papers. This book chronicles an American family from the mid-eighteenth century through Reconstruction, from New England to the Carolinas and finally to Alabama. Pattillo researched the papers of his extended family for many years in order to present their story, primarily through their own documents.

The Spencer-Robeson-McKenzie family proved adaptable to a new environment in the plantation South, where, by merit, they rose rapidly — socially, economically, and politically. After having become rich in land and slaves, the family prospered by momentum. After the Civil War and the loss of their wealth and the basis of making more, an astonishing number of the men proved incapable or unwilling to adapt to a changed environment. A significant number of them literally gave up and died before their time. The women were of sterner stuff; they proved to be the survivors.

This is that rare book: Impeccably researched, it dynamically recounts the history of one family through which the bigger story of many families may be understood. Observes historian Robert Gamble, "this is not only family history at its best — well-researched, gracefully written, irreverent at times with light touches of humor — but also very good social history."

Edward McKenzie Pattillo is a historian, writing articles for such publications as Alabama Heritage. He is currently at work on two other books.

Carolina Planters on the Alabama Frontier is available through your favorite local or online retailer, or from NewSouth Books, 334-834-3556, or at www.newsouthbooks.com. ISBN: 978-1-60306-138-4. Trade cloth, 512 pgs., $50.

Tips to Get Your Motor Running

If your car has been feeling a little sluggish lately, there are some things you can do to get your motor running right again.

First change your oil and filter. Make sure to use the grade of oil that is recommended by the car. Using the wrong grade of oil can reduce the performance of your car and its gas mileage. And, do not rely on the oil light in your car. By the time that light goes on, some damage to your engine may already have been done. So, check your oil often. When you do, also check the brake fluid and transmission fluid levels. You should flush the brake fluid, transmission fluid and coolant system every 2 years or 30,000 miles. Keeping fresh, clean fluids in your car will keep your motor running smoothly.

Two other things that will be replacing your air filter and fuel filter frequently. Clean filters will help keep dirt out of your fuel injectors, fuel pump and engine. If too much dirt accumulates, it will lead to expensive repairs.

You should also change your spark plugs every other year. Worn plugs will cause your engine to misfire and waste a lot of gas. Also, check all the belts and hoses in your car for signs of wear, especially the timing belt or timing chain. If that breaks, it can destroy your engine. When you do replace it, replace the water pump too since the procedure for each is the same.

You can do many of these things yourself. You do not have to be an ace mechanic or have a lot of experience. You just need the desire, a how to manual and a few tools. Then, when you get your motor running right, you can head on down the highway looking for adventure and be able to handle whatever comes your way.

If your car will no longer run on down the highway, please consider donating your car to charity. If you do, it will be picked up fast and free and you will get a tax deduction of at least $500 if you itemize on your federal tax return. The process is easy and there are many charities that can benefit from your car donation. For complete details on how to donate car, just go to www.cars4charities.org or by calling toll free 1-866-448-3487.
