“To Everything, Turn, Turn, Turn, There is a Season”

From the Pete Seeger tune “Turn, Turn, Turn,” a song made popular by the Byrds in 1965, “To everything, turn, turn, turn, There is a season turn, turn, turn.” The lyrics actually derived from biblical scripture, the book of Ecclesiastes. They are thought to signify times of happiness and sorrow, times for war and for peace and so as the seasons, the hands of time turn, things change.

It is spring and all that is involved with the season has “turned” and surrounds us. Spring affords the ideal time to dance, a time to reap, a time to embrace, a time to plant, a time to be born, a time to wed, a time for delight in the moment, just as the catchy tune reminds us.

A few days ago I found myself amid the solace and serenity of a garden as the song that I speak occupied the airwaves and ultimately the depths of my soul. It tugged at me, would not cease as its words filled my head and my heart with images of the times we are faced.

In a few days, like sands sifting through an hourglass another season will “turn, turn, turn.” Summer approaches quickly and with it comes a time for laughter and sorrow, a time for sunshine and rain, a time to cast away stones and a time to gather stones together, a time for war and a time for peace.

The song cries, “A time for peace, I swear it's not too late.” And with that thought comes a time for hope, for faith, for understanding, for building bridges, for resolving conflict, mending fences, forgiving, forgetting and ultimately a time, optimistically soon, for the healing of all mankind. That time is overdue, leaving us with anticipation for a brighter tomorrow.

“There is a time for every purpose under Heaven,” goes the jingle sounding very similar to “Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star,” so look toward the Heavens after dark, or around evening when that first wish-upon-a-star peeks through the enormous sky overhead. Maybe with your single wish we could find ourselves at peace once again. At peace in our hearts, on the battlefields, with ourselves and with one another. Let us pray that our season of purpose, of peace, of forgiving, of healing will “turn, turn, turn” soon, to that point where peace is found and will last for all seasons, all time.
