State Archives Webinar on Protecting Family Photos and Records Now Available

A class four hurricane with winds of 140 miles per hour is headed in your direction. What family papers and photographs will you grab as you rush out the door? What's the best way to store old letters and family diaries to protect them from weather disasters and normal deterioration? The State Archives of North Carolina can help you discover how to protect your photos and records. The State Archives' YouTube channel www.youtube.com/ncarchives offers a series of on-line tutorials that provide information on the care and preservation of family treasures. "The Care and Handling of Family Papers" tutorials were developed in conjunction with the State Historical Records Advisory Board, funded by a grant from the National Historical Records and Publications Commission.

Identifying and Protecting Essential Family Records provides an overview of how to identify what family records and papers are crucial to collect and protect in the event of a natural or man-made disaster. General Paper Preservation Tips describes how paper deteriorates and the steps you can take to extend the life of family papers in your care. Caring for and Sharing Family and Personal Papers is a step-by-step guide on how to organize, care for and share family papers. The Care and Preservation of Family Photographs provides an overview about the care and handling of family photographs, dos and don'ts for the proper care of your photographs and when to consult a conservator for those photographs that are badly damaged. Managing and Preserving Digital Images emphasizes the importance of good management and record-keeping when managing digital photographs, suggestions for easy access to your digital photographs and tips for retaining most digital data.

For information, please call (919) 807-7326. The State Archives is part of the Office of Archives and History within the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.
