

Fall 2018 Motherhead Applications Available

An exciting literacy program for mothers and grandmothers will be offered at Anson County Partnership for Children. Motherhead will be held at the Partnership every Thursday at 3:30 p.m. starting Thursday, September 20th. Childcare will be provided in the Early Childhood Resource Center at 117 South Greene Street in Wadesboro for participants. A light snack will be served before every session. Motherhead is a literacy program that uses children's books, adult poems, and narratives to teach literacy skills and practice strategies for reading with children. Mothers not only learn the "why" of reading with their children, but also the "how."

"The unique concept about Motherhead is that it is very similar to a book club. While exploring different children books we discuss different milestones that children go through and talk about the different excitements that are connected to these milestones." "I have never seen a literacy program that explore children's books the way Motherhead does. Participants learn about reading but they also get the chance to express their thoughts, fears, and excitements that mothers go through," Executive Director Caroline Goins, explained.

Motherhead applications are available for mothers and grandmothers that reside in Anson County. Applications will be located at the Partnership and online at www.ansonchildren.org. Motherhead applications will be due to the Partnership by Friday, September 7. For further information please contact Alexandra Harrington at (704) 694-4036 or email at alexandra.harrington@ansonchildren.org.

The Anson County Partnership for Children is a non-profit public/private organization formed in 1996 in response to the North Carolina Smart Start initiative. The Partnership's mission is "helping to make Anson County a better place to be a child and to raise a child."
