

Beekeeping Books Available at the Library

Seventy percent of America's food sources are pollinated by bees. Raising public awareness of the integral role of honey bees as pollinators is one goal of the Anson County Beekeepers Association. Members also conduct educational beekeeping programs and mentor one another through the association as they acquire and learn to manage hives in the county.

To further educate aspiring beekeepers, the association has donated 10 new books to the Hampton B. Allen Library this summer. Please check them out! They include

- Africanized Honey Bees in the Americas
- First Lessons in Beekeeping
- The Hive Detectives
- The Beekeepers Bible
- Natural Beekeeping: Organic Approaching to Modern Apiculture
- The Magic School Bus: Inside a Beehive
- Top-Bar Hive Beekeeping: Wisdom and Pleasure Combined
- Homegrown Honey Bees
- ABC XYZ of Bee Culture
- Honey Bees: An Amazing Discovery Book

For more information about the Anson Beekeepers Association, please contact, horticulture agent Aimee Colf at Anson Cooperative Extension 704-694-2415.
