"Coming face-to-face with a vibrant father of two, and realizing he was my patient years ago, that's when it all came full circle."

I was at a party and was approached by a young man asking if I remembered him. I paused for a few moments before it came to me. Fifteen years ago he was diagnosed with chronic myelogenous leukemia as a 20-year-old college student and underwent a bone marrow transplant. He introduced me to his young family by saying, 'This is Dr. Avalos. She saved my life.'

Seeing this healthy grown man with a wife and children in tow ... it just hit me. This is what it's all about.
