Success through initiative

Michelle Chambers, a behavior modification technician at Walter Bickett Elementary School, saw "that children needed intervention at an earlier age."

She enrolled in Early Childhood Education night classes at South Piedmont Community College, and continued to work at Walter Bickett by day. After completing her required classes, she built A+ Childcare and Learning Center beside her home. It opened 14 years ago, licensed to serve 50 pre-school children. She has since moved and converted her former home into an after-school facility to continue serving children after they start school.

While running her day care, Chambers continued taking classes at SPCC where she earned her associate degree in Early Childhood Education. Her daughter Brittney also graduated from SPCC and works at the center.

Both are now pursuing bachelor's degrees online from UNC-Pembroke.
